A RELEASE OF 4,800 BOTTLES

Wolfburn is the most northerly distillery on the Scottish mainland. Originally founded in 1821, all of Wolfburn's single malt whiskies are made the traditional way: without haste, by hand, and with a huge emphasis on quality. The results are superb, and Wolfburn's special releases are consistent winners of international spirits competitions.

Wolfburn's smooth and easy-drinking character stems from the way it is made. Long fermentation is followed by slow and gentle distillation to make a pure, smooth spirit. Maturation takes place in purpose-built warehouses just a short distance from the sea.

BATCH 318

The sixth in Wolfburn's small-batch series, Batch 318 comes from a combination of lightly-peated spirit, matured for seven years in first-fill Oloroso sherry butts, combined with spirit matured for seven years in first-fill Bourbon barrels. Just 4,800 bottles in total. A sweet, rounded, sumptuous whisky with a peerless depth of flavour.

ON THE NOSE

On the nose, figs and apricots mix with soft tones of peat smoke. There's a hint of vanilla and oak present too.

ON THE PALATE

On the palate the depth of flavour is tremendous. Honey-laced porridge meets stewed apples and sultanas. The peat brings with it a touch of heat, while soft oak spices - cinnamon and cloves and ginger - are also present, all overlaid by a wonderful sherry sweetness.

FINISH

The finish does not disappoint; dried fruit and caramel flavours remain to the end and are neatly overlaid with hints of lingering peat smoke.
